

SPORTSCASTR RENEWS PARTNERSHIP WITH THE CHRIS CARRINO AND TIM CAPSTRAW SPORTS BROADCASTING CAMP

Students at the Nation's Longest Consecutive Running Broadcasting Camp to Use the Platform Throughout Camp Week

New York, N.Y. – SportsCastr, the innovative live streaming video platform that redefines what it means to ‘call a game’ and enhance the fan experience, today announced it has renewed its media partnership as the presenting partner of the Chris Carrino and Tim Capstraw Sports Broadcasting Camp, now in its 17th year at Montclair State University in New Jersey. The camp will run July 23-27, 2018.

“It’s important to us to introduce our platform to the next generation of sportscasters” said Kevin April, SportsCastr CEO. “Our technology includes professional studio tools that students can use to develop their skills, build a following and create a demo reel, while at the same time providing us with critical real-world feedback.”

“For 17 years our campers have gained a great understanding of sports broadcasting and they have enjoyed how SportsCastr gives them further opportunity to call games and share with their friends and family,” said Camp Director Dave Siroty. “We will again utilize the platform during the week of camp and showcase to our campers the importance of continuing to practice and getting game reps under their belt. SportsCastr lets them get more and more comfortable doing games while also allowing their efforts to be seen by others. SportsCastr is the next generation of fan engagement and we get to combine the app with the next generation of broadcasters attending our camp.”

The Chris Carrino and Tim Capstraw Sports Broadcasting Camp, held at the Montclair State University School of Communications and Media, is open to boys and girls 12-and-older. Campers will learn about TV and radio play-by-play and color commentary, public speaking, sports talk, game preparation, on-camera presentation, teleprompter, interviewing skills, podcasting, multi-media content, and public address announcing. The week-long camp will include on-camera work and play-by-play of a Somerset Patriots minor league baseball game.

Carrino has been the radio voice of Nets Basketball for the last 17 years. The Fordham University graduate also calls NFL games for Compass Media and has broadcast Major League Baseball, international basketball games for NBA TV, the last three Olympics for NBC Sports, and college sports for the ESPN family of networks and Comcast. Capstraw has served as the radio color commentator for Nets Basketball for the last 16 years, broadcasting over 1,100 straight games. The former Wagner College men's basketball and baseball coach has also called the Olympics for NBC Sports, international basketball games for NBA TV, college basketball for MSG and CBS Sports Network, baseball and basketball on MSG Varsity, and more.

About SportsCastr

SportsCastr is a live-streaming platform that allows anyone to become a color commentator. Backed by some of the biggest names in sports including NBA Commissioner Emeritus David Stern and Super Bowl Champion Vernon Davis, SportsCastr enables viewers to select which user they wish to have call, recap, or predict games. The Company's FanChain cryptocurrency is designed for both SportsCastr and the global sports market, allowing users to tip broadcasters and access premium content. SportsCastr is both a second-screen experience and a first-screen social OTT platform. For more information, visit <https://SportsCastr.com> or download the beta app from the Apple iTunes App Store at <https://sportscastr.com/getapp>